Wistaria Floribunda Naga Noda; flowers 4 feet long.

« « WISTARIA » »

WITHOUT any doubt Wistaria is the finest flowering vine in cultivation for the temperate climate. It is adaptable to all conditions, for pergolas, to cover dead or live trees, to cover unsightly buildings, to beautify lovely buildings, as formal tree-like plants for formal gardens, in bush form on the lawn, and many other purposes.

Wistaria may be raised from seed and under certain favorable conditions may produce flowers within five years.

Many nurseries sell seedling Wistaria, as they can be produced cheaply, but the unfortunate result for the unlucky buyer is, they may not flower in his life time. For good and reasonably prompt results, it is absolutely necessary that Wistaria must be produced, grafted, from flowering wood, at least from flowering vines. This process of grafting has a distinct tendency to slow up the growth and produce flowers within two or three years after transplanting from our nurseries. Under certain favorable conditions, especially with larger vines, one can be assured of flowers at once. Under no circumstances should gardeners plant seedling Wistaria.

Our Wistaria are all grafted from scions taken from blooming vines or from flowering wood. Our stock should bloom very soon after planting. Grafted plants cannot be sold as cheaply as seedlings. Seedlings may not bloom for ten years.

WISTARIA CHINENSIS (Chinese Wistaria) is an excellent sort and the most commonly known Wistaria, very fragrant, and is available in two distinct varieties.

A GRAFTED 3 YEAR OLD WISTARIA PLANT IN BLOOM

WISTARIA CHINENSIS—Purple. This is the most popular variety of all, perhaps because it is found in most every nursery. Grafted.

Japanese Longcluster or Weeping Wistaria

JAPANESE WISTARIA, the most picturesque of all Wistaria, will certainly take the place of the common sort as soon as enough plants are available, at least for use as a pergola vine; a glance at our illustrations will prove that. The flower clusters are very much elongated, the flowers being somewhat thinly distributed along the central cord, or stem, producing an unrivalled, graceful effect.

Be sure to order one or two vines at once, the supply is limited. If we have sold out when your order arrives, your order may be booked either for next fall or spring planting season. Along with the description of each variety, you will find the number we can spare for each customer. If not limited, it will also be stated. No Wistarias will be supplied to dealers.

WISTARIA FLORIBUNDA (Wistaria multi-juga)—Purple. Flower clusters of medium length on young plants; Grafted plants. The old plant from which our stock was produced frequently had racemes 30 inches long.

THE UTILITY AND BEAUTY OF A WISTARIA ARBOR AS DEMONSTRATED BY THE OUTSIDE VIEW OF ONE OF THEM.
CHINESE WISTARIA WERE USED.

WISTARIA FLORIBUNDA NAGA NODA.

Extra long Japanese Wistaria. A variety of W. multijuga with astonishingly long clusters of purple flowers. On a well-established vine they will run three to four feet in length. The original old vine frequently has clusters four to five feet long. Three vines of this variety are known to exist in the Philadelphia district where they attract a tremendous lot of attention and a great many visitors, all marveling at the freakish length of flowers. For some reason this variety had escaped cultivation but is again being introduced by us. NAGA NODA is being offered by other nurseries at much higher prices, 2 to 3 year old vines as high as $15.00 each, and the existing demand has permitted these high prices, but our large stock has enabled us to cut that price in half.

Not more than 4 plants to a customer.

WISTARIA FLORIBUNDA VIOLACEA

PLENA. This variety is of great decorative value, largely on account of its impressive substantial looking flower clusters. The flowers are not unlike double Russian violet, a deep violet blue, and it is rated as being the deepest colored of all the double Wistaria. It is a distinct novelty of great value. Clusters of medium length.

WISTARIA FLORIBUNDA SHIRO NODA.

White form of Murasaki Noda. Bloom clusters 24 inches long. Also called "Fringe or Lacy Wistaria."

Not more than 2 to each customer.

WISTARIA FLORIBUNDA ROSEA (Rose Weeping Wistaria).

An interesting variation; a favored color in Japan is this superior variety of Pink Weeping Wistaria. All vines are produced from selected stock plants. Flower clusters of medium length on young plants; 24 inches or more on established vines. This Wistaria with its lovely clear pink clusters is a real sensation. To meet the growing demand for pink flowers, we have introduced this desirable novelty.

Not limited.

*Tree form or Standards, extra heavy.
